

RON WILLIS INTRO

Ron Willis is a frequent favorite to present seminars, workshops and keynote addresses to educators, healthcare providers, businesses, organizations, childcare professionals and couples throughout the United States. His experiences as a clinical psychologist, college instructor and school psychologist allow him to speak directly to a wide range of management, leadership, treatment, education, healthcare and family-centered topics that impact listeners today.

Ron holds an education specialist degree from Fort Hays State University and has completed additional graduate course work at Kansas State University and the University of Denver. He is a member of the National Speakers Association (Professional Level). He and his wife, Karen, reside in the small north central Kansas community of Jewell, where they enjoy the frequent return of their 6 children, 19 grandchildren and 2 great grandchildren.

With a gentle, yet penetrating style, the Man of the Old Green Porch Swing weaves powerful personal anecdotes, poems and pictures into the hearts of his audience to impart important life principles that profoundly impact professional and personal decision making.

Please join me in welcoming...Ron Willis.
