

“No More Excuses” has been hailed as “the perfect message at the perfect time”.

Why do some succeed while others fail? It starts with eliminating excuses, eradicating justifications and taking personal accountability for choices, actions and results. It starts with accountability.

For over thirty years, Sam Silverstein has led thriving companies, selling upwards of $100 million in products and services. He has witnessed successful people fail, and seen underdogs triumph. He has distilled his invaluable experiences and observations into a message companies need now more than ever.

Sam presents the four phases of accountability and the five critical, but often overlooked, ways to be proactively accountable. Sam shows how to increase success and significance in business and in life, and will challenge your group to take an honest look at themselves. Attendees discover what important road-blocks keeping them from achieving their goals. Application of Sam’s principles improves leadership, increases sales and improves customer service. By creating an organizational culture based in accountability the enterprise grows stronger.

“No More Excuses” has been hailed by planners as “the perfect message at the perfect time”. As an opening presentation it becomes a powerful touchstone for audience members and sets the tone for personal accountability for the remainder of the event. As the conference closing message, attendees internalize the significance of accountability in the post-event ‘real’ world.

Motivation / Inspiration: Accountability is the catalyst to achieve previously unattainable goals and experience unprecedented success.

Sales / Customer Service: Accountability is today’s competitive advantage to reclaim market share and win the heart of a hyper-discerning consumer.

Leadership / Teamwork: Accountability encourages top-down transparency, and builds trust in a fragile and turbulent workplace.

“Accountability is not a consequence.
Accountability is your competitive advantage!™”
