The Excerpts:

- Featured Guest

Lon Safko is a remarkably creative person. He is the creator of the "First Computer To Save A Human Life". That computer, along with 18 inventions and more than 30,000 of Lon's papers, are in the Smithsonian in Washington, D.C. He has created numerous hardware and software solutions for the physically challenged, developed the first CAD software for civil engineers, designed the archetypes for the Apple Newton & Microsoft's Bob Operating Systems He is also responsible for those handy little Tool-Tips help-balloon pop-ups!, Arizona Innovation Network's Innovator of the Year, The Arizona Software Association's Entrepreneur of the Year, twice nominated for the Ernst & Young / Inc. Magazine Entrepreneur of the Year, and The Public Relations Society of America's, Edward Bernays, Mark of Excellence Award, and nomination as a Fellow of the nation's Computer History Museum. Lon has also been featured in Entrepreneur Magazine, PC Novice, and Popular Science Magazines just to name a few. Lon was recently selected by the Smithsonian to represent "The American Inventor" at their annual conference.
